COLLEGE ATHLETICS.

President of Trinity Board Says Situation is Deplorable.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
HARTFORD, CONN., July 12.—In the annual report of Flavel 8. Luther, president, to the trustees of Trinity College, made public yesterday, there is a reference to collegiate athletics. The report ence to collegiate athletics. The report says:

"The general athletic situation has not improved. More and more the supposed interests of the various sports absorb unduly the attention of the few, while healthful and improving recreation is neglected by the many.

"Trinity has not escaped the widely prevalent demoralization due to the importance unwisely attributed to athletic success. We hace had unpleasant evidence in our athletic history of hunted moral perception and of an indifference to the means made use of in attaining supposedly desirable ends almost as discouraging as the corruption largely complained of in American business and politics."

OF BALTIMORE, MD.
An interesting opisode of the close of the season at the Peahody Conservatory of Music, of Baltimore, Md., was the visit of W. J. Henderson, the noted New York music critic and author. Mr. Henderson, music critic and author. Ar. Henderson, after attending the four closing concerts, wrote in part: "I cannot believe that any other American conservatory would bring forward so many advanced pupils at a series of commencement concerts.

• • I am thoroughly satisfied that a more sincere, devoted and honestly ar

a more sincere, devoted and honestly artistic body of instructors does not exist anywhere else. • • • The institution is admirably equipped for the development of artists."

The past season was the most successful in the history of the conservatory, not only in the remarkable numerical growth in membership, but in the improvement in artistic achievement in every department of study. Nearly 1,000 every department of study. Nearly 1,000 pupils were enrolled. The oportunity of hearing the master compositions of difhearing the master compositions of dif-ferent epochs presented by the greatest artists of the day, the advantage of play-ing with and before others, the ensemble rehearsals, the lectures, the pleasant mu-sical association, the class spirit—all these tended to stimulate a healthy in-terest and to establish a high ideal of excellence by means not obtainable out-aids of a conservatory. side of a conservatory.
